On our arriving at the side of a stream in a narrow gorge, invariably, within a few minutes after they opened a package of this paste, although there might not have been a butterfly in sight before, those most brilliant of their kind would come sailing up, always from leeward, and I have made some of my best catches in this manner. I have also caught them by baiting with a piece of over-ripe or even rotting banana. At other times they were almost unapproachable. They seem to live on fruits just merging into the state of rottenness. I have never been able to detect any sensitiveness to sound in insects, and suspect that the case cited by one of your correspondents might be equally explained by sight, or by the vibration of the air caused by striking the glass. That certain coleoptera and diptera are attracted by smell alone is too obvious to require proof. The same may be said of ants in following an established trail. I have experimented with this frequently, obliterating the scent for a space of but a few inches; and watching the puzzled wanderers each going an inch or less beyond his predecessor, hunting the lost clue until the blank was finally bridged over. After that if the new route as re-opened differed from the old, it was nevertheless rigidly followed even if longer and less direct. Another matter. You mention a case of drowning by...
