Aesthetic movement was prominent during the 19th century where it was made famous by the artists Oscar Wilde and Aubrey Beardsley. The art during the 19th century was also associated with the decadence and symbolism movements in France and decadentismo represented in Italy, it is always considered the British style of the other arts in France and Italy. It is also referred to as the introduction of ideology that emphasized art in metalwork, furniture, stained glass, books, ceramics, and wallpaper and textile production (Brown 409). The Philadelphia exposition in 1876 was the reason for its wide grown popularity in the world and the industrial revolution in England during mid-19 century. 12 pp. English.
