The oil that drips from the wick drops down into this trough and then goes back into here. This lamp has two arms or posts that are fastened on a ring. There is a little round button here, and one like it on the other side, that fastens onto the oil tank so that it can swing either way, but it won't tip over. This is a little cup with two tubes sticking up through it, and the wicks go down into the oil tank. You can unscrew it. It soaks up twice as much oil and gives three times as much light as one wick would. On this you don't unscrew the cap, but put the oil in through a little place there. You can lower and raise the wicks of this one by this little tube. In this lamp they had a single wick, and when they wanted to put the light out, they put this cap over it and put it out. Baxter. This lamp is a Russian Sabbath-lamp. They put the oil in the tube here, and it goes out into these six troughs. If the oil drops, it goes along a little groove into this little pan. This lamp (exhibiting lamp) was used in New England about three hundred RUSSIAN SABBATH-LAMP years ago. You can open this and put the oil in, and then it will snap back. There is a little place in it...
